Eating what they were used to eating would also have protected Daniel and his friends against stomach upsets resulting from change of diet and gorging lots of rich food from the king's table. The real miracle here, perhaps, was that Daniel and his friends were not harmed by drinking water instead of wine: in the ancient world water was often contaminated.

Yet though Daniel was submissive to every other requirement laid on the young captives, he drew the line at eating the king's meat and drinking the king's wine (v. 8). The word translated "meat" (vv. 5, 8) means rich food. 4 Why did he object to the food and drink but not to his new name or to his schooling under the Babylonians? We can surely agree that the name and the education imposed upon him were not the best.

Why Daniel Refused the King's Food

Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego were healthier than the other young men that ate the king's provisions. Of course, they looked better, so the king's man gave everyone the vegetables to eat instead. God was with Daniel and his friends and they were given wisdom.

To eat together implies friendship, support, endorsement, and shared values. In the end Daniel could obey the king and even serve in his government, but he could not pretend to be his friend. To eat that food in that situation represented a moral compromise of everything Daniel believed. Therefore, he made up his mind he would not do it.
